Here and there we have heard some the President to develop and utilize protest against getting unduly excited the food resources of the nation to the over the food question, and occasional utmost and to protect the people from their shameless operations. It is absolutely essential that the Government should be at once invested with the authority to deal with the food situalike the master of a great household and to order and manage it on the basis of the highest war efficiency. The people of Ohio and the people of every other state in the Union should at once make it plain to their congressmen that they will not tolerate any mercenary lobbies with regard to this matter in Washington, and demand the passage of the pursuing enemy, but because he the Administrations's measures without

It is not yet too late to produce a It is not yet too late to produce a record-breaking crop of potatoes, beans, corn and some other things, if the farmer is made to understand that he is not going into "a gamble," but is working on a certainty. An illustration of what we mean is furnished in certain parts of Southern Kentucky. Tobacco paid treemeasury profits there last year and promises larger profits this year. and promises larger profits this year. Even the small tenant farmer, black as well as white, has been making big money. When you go to him and tell him he should pay four or five dollars a bushel for seed potatoes and great sums for beans and put all his land in them this year, he wants to know whether he will get back even what he puts in. And many farmers in that section, and we imagine in every other part of the country, will go in for a certain crop in preference to one from which they think it possible they may not receive much return. This is why it is important that with appeals to the farmer's patriotism there should be State or Government assurances against loss, and practical help by which he may be enabled to do the work he is asked to do. What the State will do along this line we do not know, but the best me-thod of getting the farmer to do his best is certainly likely to arise.

The pressing and predominant ques-tion is how to get and conserve the increased output that is essential to us and to the world.

"HOW DRY I AM!"

Saloon Keepers Warned Against Selling Liquors To Soldiers.

Abstemiousness was forced upon men in khaki the past week by saloon men and liquor dealers throughout Cincin-nati following the isuance of a warning by the National Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association to refrain from selling intoxicating drinks to officers and men in army uniforms. The warning reads:

The anti-liquor provision of the army act has been signed by the President and is now a law. It is unlawful to sell any intoxicating liquor, beer, ale or wines, to any officer or member of the military force in uniform.
"We suggest to our members that you instruct your salesmen to notify the re-tail dealers of this and to urge strict obedience to it.

"The penalty for violation of this pro-vision is $1,000 line and one year in jail." Soldiers, generally, took the "clamping down of the lid" on them good-natured-ly. There were a few, however, who resented the anti-liquor provision of the army act and made known their dis-pleasure by yelling in front of saloons: "Why don't you hang out a German
